Hussar Council Reduce Mill Rate

The Hussar Council held its organizing meeting on Tuesday, the 17th. Mr. E.J. Bell, who was re-elected by acclamation on February 2nd, was also re-elected Reeve by the Councillors, H. D. Brown and W. G. Nelson. A discussion of the estimates for 1942 resulted in a drop in the mill rate for the general tax from 10 to 8 mills. The Secretary-Treasurer, M. C. Bell, was appointed assessor for 1942, and the same assessment will stand for this year as in 1941. It was also decided to loan the Government $300 by purchasing a Victory Bond to that amount.

"Fill her up" will become an unfamiliar phrase when gasoline rationing goes into effect in Canada on April first. For each coupon the service station attendant detaches from your book, shown here, he will deliver one unit of gasoline. If you want only half a unit, the seller can bisect a coupon along a perforated line. When the plan was first announced it was thought a coupon would be for five gallons, but the shortage is becoming more acute and no one can predict how much it will represent.

Cash Is Cash In Hussar, Even Dimes

On Monday morning, one of the committee for the Victory Loan Drive came in with almost $200 in silver, as well as other subscriptions. It seems that Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Reilly decided to take a $100 Bond for each of their children, Sylvia, aged four, and Vance, aged two years. When the children's banks were opened, the parents found almost $200; a small cream cheque being all that was required to make up the balance. So, the Reilly youngsters are the proud possessors of a $200 Victory Bond each, and the Government has $200 more in solid silver.

ARDENT COMMUNITY AND RED CROSS WORKER PASSES SUD- DENLY.

The death on Wednesday morning, March 4th, of Mrs. Louis Conn, wife of one of Bassano's merchants, brought a shock to the residents of the town and district, at her untimely passing.

While Mrs. Conn had been in poor health for some time, she had spent only a short time in the Bassano Hospital, and as late as Tuesday evening, reports were that she was recovering from a recent operation.

Mrs. Conn passed away in her thirty-seventh year.

Born in Rumania, she came to Canada with her parents as a baby of one year old. She had been a resident of Alberta for for the last 34 years. She married 14 years ago.

During her time in Bassano, Mrs. Conn was an ardent community worker and a staunch supporter of the Red Cross and its work. At the same time she was an active partner in the store operated by her husband.

Left to mourn her loss are her husband and small daughter, Isabel, her mother, in Bassano, and brothers and other relatives in the United States.

The funeral took place at Foster and Foster Funeral Home, Calgary, on Thursday, March 5th, and interment was in the Jewish Cemetery there.

Residents of the town and district join with the Recorder in extending our sympathies to Mr. Conn and Isabel.

MUST IT HAPPEN HERE?

Two weeks ago Prime Minister Churchill told the world of the fall of Singapore, and a bloody finis was written to a chapter in democracy's tragic story of "too little, too late." Pounded by day and night, overwhelmed by sheer weight of men and material, the defenders of the second strongest fortress in the world had been forced to capitulate. The mighty bastion that had been expected to hold out indefinitely was reduced to a heap of rubble, its water supply cut off, its oil stores aflame and its dock installations smashed and useless. The city itself had been bombed and blasted, and its populace was at the mercy of the conqueror. All this had been accomplished by the Japanese in a matter of weeks.

Later Sunday Canada's Prime Minister and the President of the United States joined in the inauguration ceremonies attendant on the launching of Canada's new Victory Loan effort. Their appeals could not have overemphasized the urgency of the hour and its need. Victory is to us and our allies in this great struggle. There can be no doubt that the united nations with whom we are fighting possess the strength, the productive capacity, and the resources needed to overthrow the forces of aggression now arrayed against them. Only one danger presents itself, and that is the danger that overthrew Singapore. It is the danger that delivered up France to her ancient enemy, the danger that paved the way for the stab in the back at Pearl Harbor.

It is the danger of hesitancy, of postponement, of timidity, of complacency, of the half done job.

We in Western Canada may not be in the same imminent peril that beset Singapore, but the day is long past when we can look upon this as a war "over there," a nice, comfortable war ten thousand miles away. Direct Japanese attack on our coasts is no longer a remote possibility, it is something we must list among the probabilities.

This war is not just a soldier's war, it is everybody's war. It must be waged in shipyards and factories, on farms and in forests, in shops and in homes. It calls for fighting and building and planning and sacrificing, and it calls for these things today. Tomorrow may be too late, and the victory that justice would award us may have been snatched by other hands.

Forty-seven thousand dollars asked from Bassano and district by Canada's leaders, and that sum must be subscribed quickly. There is no other answer that could be given to such an appeal. With the forty seven thousand dollars, however, must come an awakening of spirit and a deepening of resolve, a renewal of effort and a multiplication of sacrifice.

Singapore was more than a naval base and a fortress. It was a great and proud city, a meeting place of the trade routes of the seven seas, a custodian of the wealth of a great region. Today, it is another evidence of "too little, too late."

Let us see that it does not happen here.

The total subscribed by Canadians in the 1941 Victory Loan was $836,820,250. The amount asked for was the same as the present Victory Loan—$600,000,000. The need for money was great then, but it is much greater now.

A man in London was sentenced to seven days in jail for snoring in an air raid shelter. Thus are our sacred, if not silent, liberties taken from our kith and kin in war time. Yet there are those who are reluctant to loan their surplus cash to fight a war and bring it to a successful issue; a war that with the passing of every month robs us of some peace time convenience or liberty.

"There are 24,000 Japanese living in Canada within 100 miles radius of Vancouver. Considering the population of Vancouver and Toronto, if you people had the same proportion of Japanese we have, you would have 100,000 Japanese. We have twice as many Japanese as the State of Washington with only half its population."—Howard Green, M.P., at Toronto.

At a dinner the hostess had a hot argument with Winston Churchill. She remarked that she didn't care three skips of a louse for what he said. He immediately wrote on a place card to send to her:

"A lady has told me and in her own house that for me she cares not three skips of a louse. I forgive the dear lady, for what she has said, For women must talk of what runs in their head."

Mid-Week Thought For Busy People

By CHARLES F. LAINE
PASTOR OF KNOX PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

"FROM WHAT MOTIVE?"

"If ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye?"—Luke 8:34.

In everything we do, whether we stop to realize it or not, there is a motive which greatly affects not only what we do, but how we do it, and the extent to which we do it. This is clearly pointed out in more than one passage of the New Testament. For instance Christ said to the multitude, "Ye seek me not because ye saw the miracle, but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled." That was a wrong motive for seeking the Master. Then again when He speaks of the man who came to his friend for three loaves at midnight, which request was at first refused, He goes on to say, "Though he will not rise and give him because he is a friend, yet because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth." The man gave, but it was really from a wrong motive. This applies also in the passage with which we started out, "If ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye?" In each instance it is a question of the 'motive' rather than the 'deed' that is raised, and surely the inference is clear to all of us, namely, that the higher the Motive, the more worthy the Deed.

There is a parallel too, in at least two of these instances, which strikes very close to 'home' right at this time. A 'Friend' has come to us in need, our Canadian Government is appealing to us, and the urgent cry of that need is— "Lend me." "Lend me." "An Army is in the field, a Fleet is on the ocean, a Squadron is in the air," says our Government, "and we must have something to set before them, we must have equipment for them, we must provide them with 'the tools to finish the job.' They are fighting for you and me, Friend, will you lend to your friend the Government, so that we can feed, and equip, and supply our friends who are fighting for us, with everything they need?" And our reply to that appeal, or the extent of our reply, will depend upon the 'motive' with which we lend. The higher the Motive, the more worthy, and the more worth-while, will be our response.

Will we lend merely because we hope to receive just as much again, but with interest added? That isn't a very high motive. It is a selfish one at best and merits no thanks. Will we lend like the man whose friend came for three loaves, just because someone continued to keep asking us, or because the salesman appointed to call on us keeps on calling and that is the only way we can get rid of him? Or on the other hand will we lend because we realize there is a Need, a dire and pressing need? Will we lend because the Government is our friend? Because it stands for all the best that we enjoy in that Freedom and Liberty which we call democracy? Will we lend because it is our friends—the Soldiers, and Sailors, and Airmen who are fighting our battle—for whom the Government is asking us to lend? If any, or all of these last three motives are the motives that actuate us in our lending, then I am sure that we will lend all we can, as quickly as we can, and as willingly as we can, and our contribution to the Second Victory Loan will be both a worthy and a worthwhile one, and the objective we reach here in Bassano will be as high as the Motives that inspired the deeds.

Let us then, because it is our duty to lend; because it is our Privilege to lend; because it is our Pleasure to lend—for from such high motives will come great achievements. Not only that, but we will be helping our Friend the Government which is protecting us; helping all our friends everywhere by ensuring their safety, and if we must come back to a motive that isn't so high as those others, we will be helping ourselves too, to retain the Liberties and Privileges which we enjoy in this Canada of ours.

So take an "interest" in more than the "Interest" and you'll be more than interested in the results. In other words—Strengthen the "bonds of Friendship" with "Victory Bonds" and thus help all to avoid the "Nazi Bonds." Wont you?

Thanks a Million! Six times over.

Canadian Troops in England Make Many Friends, Have Good Conduct Record

This is the in the series of articles written by Hug Templin, of the Fergus News-Record exclusively for the weekly newspapers of Canada. Mr. Templin flew to Britain as a guest of the British Council and was given an opportunity to see what is being done in Britain in wartime.

It was natural that a Canadian on a visit to Britain should want to see as much as possible of the Canadian Army overseas. Some of the Canadian editors had sons or brothers in the service. Everyone had lists of addresses of boys from home.

Actually it wasn't so easy to find any individual soldier. The Canadian units are scattered over much of the southern part of England, and while I was there, they were taking part in large scale manoeuvres, the bulk of the Canadian Corps moving around London and up towards the coast to meet a pretended invasion. It was interesting to see this large army on the move, but hard to locate units or individuals.

A few days after I arrived in London, a rather unpleasant incident occurred.

The first six editors reached the city late on Saturday night. We were met by E. D. O'Brien, of the British Council, who steered us through the black-out to the Savoy, got us settled in four rooms and by ten o'clock, had us sitting down to dinner at the table reserved for us in the grill room. We had hardly begun to eat before a reporter edged himself into the circle, proceeded to order himself a meal at the expense of our hosts, topped it off with a bottle of whiskey and proceeded to "interview me because he was beside me. It was an exhibition of nerve such as I had seldom beheld, and I suspect our host seethed inside, but did not want to say anything in front of his guests. As the bottle got lower, I wondered what the interview was going to sound like.

As it turned out, it wasn't as bad as it might have been, but my name was spread over Britain as the editor of a great group of weekly papers, stretching from coast to coast.

That brought in what the radio and movie people would call "fan mail," but which might more properly be called "letters to the editor."

One of them was a scurrilous post-card, denouncing the conduct of the Canadian troops in Britain. The writer said he was coming to the Savoy next morning to tell me all about them. I made enquiries, found that the writer was an Australian in London, not too well thought of himself and a bit of a crank. The English people resented what he had done. The man turned up next day, but I made sure I was away at the time.

Troops Have Excellent Record

After that, I made it my particular business, wherever I went, to ask about the Canadian boys in England. I received answers from high and low. I slipped away from the group and talked with English people in their gardens. I got official figures from Canadian Army Headquarters. I talked with civilians and English soldiers. Before I left London, I had satisfied myself beyond any doubt. The record is not perfect, of course, but there were few serious crimes or misdemeanors. I learned little bad and much good. The one definite episode in which a group of Canadian soldiers took part rather amused me, though perhaps I should have been shocked.

The British people cannot speak too highly of the Canadians. Many of our soldiers are billeted in private houses, especially east of London in the villages near the Thames. These boys have been adopted as members of the families.

One day, during manoeuvres at Aldershot, I went along the street asking the residents what they thought of the Canadians. I asked if they had any complaints, if there had been any trouble. Almost invariably, they had nothing but praise. I never heard any criticism of the Second Division, which was in the district at the time, although there was some of another division which had been there earlier. Aldershot had probably seen more of the Canadians than any other town.

The best authority is doubtless the Provost Marshall of the Canadian Headquarters Staff. I had dinner with him one night at the quaint old East Indies and Sporting Club in London. He gave me comparative figures. It might be expected that the record of the English regiments, living near their own homes, would be better than that of the Canadians. Actually it isn't. Crime among the soldiers of the Canadian Corps is only one-third as prevalent in proportion to the number enlisted, as in the Imperial Forces. In spite of driving conditions that are strange to Canadians, the highway accident records of Canadians is better in proportion to the number of vehicles. Investigation of accidents showed that there was a tendency to blame the Canadians for more than their share. For instance, a woman called up one day to say that a Canadian Army vehicle had damaged her fence. Asked how she knew it was Canadian, she said it had a hippopotamus painted on the side. It was explained to her that the hippopotamus was not a Canadian animal: the vehicle belonged to another Dominion.

A Few Actual Incidents

Perhaps a few simple stories will illustrate the attitude of the English people toward the Canadians.

In a small city near London, friends called a taxi to take me to the railway station in the blackout. When the driver arrived and found I was a Canadian, he asked if I would mind if he went around by his house and brought his wife along; she would like to talk to a Canadian. When I left them at the station, he would not accept a cent from me.

Waiting for the train at that same station, I talked to three English Aircraftsmen in the R.A.F. They were loud in their praise of the Canadians because of an incident that had just happened. They had ordered lunch at a refreshment counter. Service was slow. An English major came along after their orders were in and insisted on being served first. The girl at the counter refused. A bit of an argument had arisen till it was settled by an R.C.A.F. Officer of higher rank who took the part of the boys. He had given the major a bit of a lecture. "After all," he concluded, "We are all fighting for the same"

Warn Merchants Who Oversell Sugar Ration

A warning to merchants who without question, fill requests for sugar in excess of the sugar rationing regulations is given by Walter S. Campbell, Prices and Supply representative for Alberta under the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

"As a result of information given us," says Mr. Campbell, "We have sent out certain persons to make sugar purchases for the Board, in excess of the amounts allowed for their families. In many cases it was found that merchants filled these orders without any question whatever, and without taking the name of the purchaser. Retailers, as well as consumers, are bound by the sugar rationing regulations and must observe them."

The regulations allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar per person—50 per cent more than the allowance in Great Britain—and supplies may be bought for two weeks in advance. A family of four may buy six pounds of sugar each two weeks and a family of six, nine pounds.

Where the housewife wishes to make marmalade, she can obtain the extra proportionate amount of sugar required when buying the oranges, or on production of the purchase slip.

Super-Daylight Time for Britain

Double Summer Time—two hours ahead of Greenwich Mean Time, and one hour ahead of the current British Summer Time—will begin in Britain April 4 and end August 8.

(British clocks now are seven hours ahead of Mountain Daylight Time.)

Prosperous Era Can Follow War

"The era following the war might well be, instead of a period of depression as some pessimists forecast, a time of unparalleled prosperity created by new industries, new people and the latent power of Victory Bonds."

This encouraging note comes from a speech recently delivered by B. A. Trestrail, prominent Toronto radio executive, who is in charge of the Dominion Industrial sales of the Victory Loan.

"The sale of each and every bond is a stepping-stone to victory," he added, "and the current campaign must succeed if Canada is to give concrete evidence of the determination for victory that marked the first campaign."

MORE ABOUT

Canadian Troops in England

King." One night the London Standard had a cartoon. It showed an English girl, rather embarrassed, introducing a young R.C.A.F. man to her parents, with the words, "I picked him up along the road." The next day, I sat beside the editor of the Standard at a luncheon. He told me the story.

He and his wife had been driving to their country home the previous Sunday. Along the road they caught up to a young couple with their thumbs up. Hitch-hikers are not common in England but one had an R.C.A.F. uniform so they stopped to pick them up.

They learned that the girl had just met the Canadian. In fact it was his first week in England. She invited him to her home and he accepted. As they neared the place where she was to get out she began to have doubts. Perhaps he would not be welcomed. The editor was a good sport. He offered to take the Canadian to his home and that was agreed upon, but as the girl got ready to go, she changed her mind. She wouldn't give him up, no matter what her parents said. So he went along with her.

I have already mentioned the warm reception given us at Coventry. When a large part of that city was wiped out, most residents escaped with their lives but little else. Canadian garments clothed the people; Canadian travelling kitchens fed them; Canadian medical supplies eased their pain. Standing in the midst of Coventry Cathedral, the Provost presented to each Canadian editor a priceless souvenir, a cross made of two ancient nails picked up among the ruins.

Actually every person I met had high praise for Canada and Canadians—and it was sincere, not merely a polite gesture. Many of them had visited Canada. There was Lord Riverdale, head of a great steel company, who knew my own town of Fergus; Sir Harry Brittain, who asked particularly about Acton Ontario, because he had visited there, his home being in Acton, England; Winston Churchill, who promised to visit Canada again as soon as he could, a promise since carried out; James Bone, London editor of the Manchester Guardian, who lost his clothes when his boat was torpedoed as he returned from Canada; and the taxi-driver who used to work at Jasper Park and believed it was the most beautiful spot on earth. Canadian Soldiers and English Girls Many CCCanadian soldiers are marrying English girls. That is not surprising, but few in Canada realize how many weddings there have been. The Commanding Officer of a Western Ontario battalion told me that 100 of his men had married English and Scottish girls. He said they were good girls, of the best types, for he insisted on interviewing every one before he gave his permission for the marriage to take place.

Now that is something that Canadian relatives of soldiers and particularly Canadian girls, should not overlook. B.K. Sandwell, who was with me, believes that a certain "glamour" surrounds Canadians in Britain. He ascribes this in part to the movies and novels. Perhaps he is right. At a big aircraft factory, I saw a girl sitting at a table reading a paper covered novel, entitled "Love in the North." On the cover was a huge Canadian youth dressed in fur parka, hugging a beautiful girl, while the aurora borealis made a brilliant background. Bishop Renison who has spent much of his life in the north was much amused.

I think there is more practical side to it than that. The English believe we live in a land of plenty and wealth. Just now, when we eat much they can't get, that idea spreads. A Canadian is considered a "catch," and from what I saw on the streets and elsewhere, English girls are out to "get their man" in wartime.

From the soldier's point of view, I believe loneliness plays a part. The boys don't get enough letters from home. Perhaps they get plenty at first but the number falls off. Some don't get any. They want the news from home, but even more, they want to think that they have not been forgotten. They need letters even more than they need parcels—newsy gossip letters telling what people at home are doing. And they like the home town newspapers, which pass from hand to hand. Councils or service clubs would be doing good, acts if they would subscribe for the local paper for all boys from their towns who are overseas.

Parcels are appreciated, of course. The troops are adequately fed, but they get few luxuries in England that are plentiful here. Candies are most welcome. I saw candies only twice in England and they were really confections, not real candies. I would have given much for some real ones. Send potted fancy meats and cheese, marmalade and jams in tins (not glasses), braces and garters and razor blades.

Illustrated magazines, such as Life, are heavy to send but are most welcome. Send a few of them to your soldiers, or to Mr. A. Savard, Canadian Army Headquarters Cockspar Street, London.

But remember, letters are best of all. There can't be too many of them.

Plebiscite Will Cost $1,500,000

A complete voters' list will be prepared for the plebiscite by which the government seeks release from its commitments against conscription. It was announced last week at Ottawa by Secretary of State Hon. Norman McLarty. But the lists will neither be revised nor printed and those whose names are inadvertently dropped may vote after taking the oath and being vouched for by a voter in the same district. The cost of taking the plebiscite, if all workers must be paid, will be around $1,500,000, the minister said.

EVERY ADVERTISEMENT IS FLAG OF DEFIANCE

"Woven deep into the ways of democracy is advertising: a bridge between the freedom of people to buy and the freedom of people to sell. No Nazi bombing has been able to destroy that bridge in England.

"Every advertisement appearing there today is a flag of defiance; is direct testimony of someone's faith in the future; is someone's toast to victory."

The foregoing statement is the result of a study prepared by the London branch of Lord and Thomas, New York advertising firm on British business and advertising in the third year of the war.

London, where food and clothing

Thrift EQUIPS MEN

For the men of Canada's army, only the best will do. From tin hats to service boots their equipment must be the finest Canada can produce.

Good equipment costs money... large sums of money. And that money must be provided by the men and women of Canada out of current income.

How? By honouring pledges to invest in war savings certificates every month. By saving now, to pay war taxes when due. By saving now, to invest in Victory Loans should further loans be necessary.

This means that every Canadian must learn to do without some of the things he normally enjoys. Watch your spending. Stern duty demands that we Save for Victory now.

BASSANO, ALBERTA, BRANCH—H. W. HARPER, MANAGER

Many Hear Rev. Bright At Knox Church Sunday

On Sunday night last a large number of worshippers gathered in Knox Presbyterian Church had the pleasure of hearing the Rev. A. Bright, B.A., B.D., bring an inspiring Lenten address under the title of "The Man Who Carried the Cross," in which the speaker skillfully centered the attention of his listeners upon Simon of Cyrene, who, when Christ fell under the weight of the Cross, took the Cross upon his own shoulders, and bore it after Jesus. Mr. Bright brought out the fact that people fell into two classes, spectators or bearers. The indifferent to Christ and His Church would be content to be merely spectators, but sincere men and women, those who had sympathy in their hearts for others, would, like Simon, bear the Cross after Jesus. He pointed out too that the Scripture records that Simon had two sons, Alexander and Rufus, back in the home from which he came at Cyrene in Libya, and that later, when Paul's missionary journeys in the Mediterranean seas took him to those parts, he found two Christian men there named Alexander and Rufus, sons of Simon, the father who had carried the Cross. "No greater bequest," said Mr. Bright, "Could a man leave to his sons, than the memory that their father had carried the Cross of Christ during his lifetime. There are many great things one may do," continued the speaker, but none greater than to bear the Cross of Christ, and to help forward the work of His Church in the world."

Following the address, Mr. Bright announced that he was commissioned by the Calgary Presbytery to bring some matters of importance before the Bassano Church. He stated that the Presbytery, at its last meeting in February, had given this field the status of a Catechist charge, and desired that the church here would raise the Pastor's salary to the Catechist level, as previously requested, for at least one year. In this way, he pointed out, this field would be giving Mr. Laine an opportunity to become an ordained minister. Mr. Bright himself has undertaken to go before the General Assembly in June and personally present the request for Mr. Lane's ordination. That being secured, Knox Church would then have a Minister fully qualified to conduct all the offices and Sacraments of the Church, as the Pastor here already possesses an educational standing that would be acceptable to the Assembly's Board of Education, his status on the increased salary basis being the only other requirement.

Mr. Bright then put this matter to a standing vote by the Congregation as a mandate to the Session and Board on which to act. The motion was carried unanimously, there being no one standing when "those opposed" were called to vote. Thus it now devolves upon the Session and Board to make arrangements for the increase in salary which will put Mr. Laine in line for ordination, as expressed as the wish of the Congregation.

Fallow Charges Discrimination Against Alberta

Feeling throughout Edmonton is that at any moment the decision to build the Alaska Highway through Alberta will be announced either in Washington or Ottawa. The U.S. Army commission which surveyed the route last week gave early endorsement to it, and obtained from the Alberta Government assurances of complete co-operation, with the Public Works Department playing a major role. Reports from both Canadian and American capitals suggest that the Alberta route has the edge over all others.

In the Legislature, Hon. W.A. Fallow told the full story of intensive efforts made to bring the Alberta route to the notice of responsible U.S. and Canadian authorities. Through maps, circulars and publicity channels, by direct contact with responsible persons, the enlistment of chambers of commerce and legislators along the territory to be covered by the route, the case for Alberta was promoted. Mr. Fallow declared that great co-operation was received in the United States but that communications with Ottawa were not answered. He charged the Dominion Government with "rank discrimination" in ignoring the claims of this province.
